Shame kept me from sharing my story. Denial of what I knew to be true kept me from repeating it again. I found a space, the SHARE Committee, where shame did not point fingers, where my experience was validated and I was embraced. I found the courage to heal with brave souls to share the journey of recovery. As a domestic violence refugee, I found a home.

― Clover

We are men, women, brothers and sisters, children and parents. We do not wish to be pitied nor blamed. We are united in a common vision: to heal ourselves as we shed light on the darkness of our pasts. We each have our own unique stories and we support others to share theirs in a community of support and understanding.

― Clay

Being a part of SHARE has helped me to discover not only my voice, but also my power and self-worth. I will never be silenced again.
